Falconer School

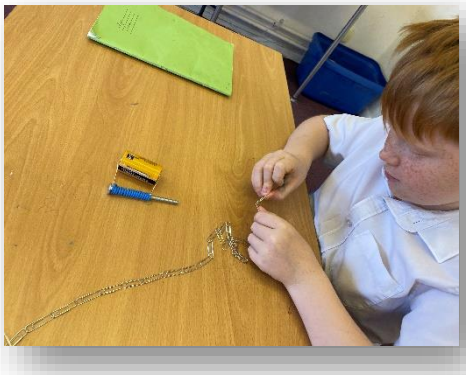
Achieving the extraordinary together

Headteacher's Weekly Blog Friday 25 June

Dear Parents and Carers,

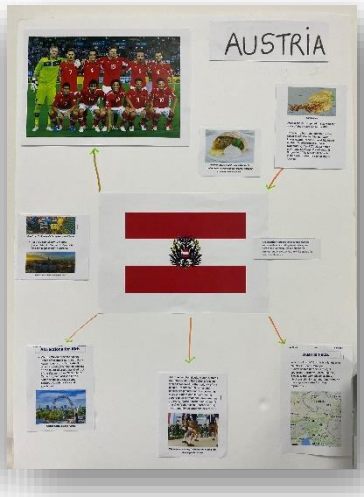
The highlight of this week has been the visit to the school site from a hydrogen fuelled bus. It is one of the first hydrogen powered buses in the country on trial at the moment and we were lucky enough to have a short presentation explaining to the students how it works followed by a ride on the bus. The bus is zero emission and runs on hydrogen, with water being the only thing coming out of the back. The boys had a fantastic time, as did the staff! A big thank you to Mr Saich for organising this event in school.

Science lessons have continued to inspire and amaze students both inside and outside of the classroom. It has been lovely seeing the boys interact with nature with Ryan preparing to set the newly hatched butterfly free and Lucas resucing a bee.



The theme of the week was 'Being Positive'. Assistant Headteacher, Ms Greenwood, delivered a thought provoking assembly to the boys about inspirational people who remained positive despite facing adversity in their lives.

The form football Euros display competition have been lovely to see around the school. My particular favourite is from 8c in Miss Vora's classroom which features pictures of the students in the form and staff members taking part in a football match. Here are a selection of the displays around the school:



My favourite part of the school day is when I am lucky enough to visit and observe lessons taking place. This week I was able to observe a Year 8 Maths lesson where the students were learning about percentages. It is always fascinating to witness the learning process in action.

Have a lovely weekend.

Mrs Ash

Headteacher