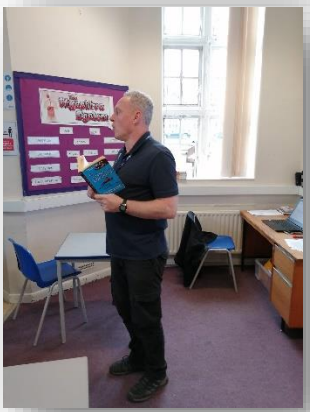
Falconer School

Achieving the extraordinary together

Headteacher's Weekly Blog Friday 5th March

Dear Parents and Carers,

The highlight of this week has been the celebration of World Book Day which took place yesterday. The day started with a quiz during form time where students had to guess which teacher was represented by the books they were reading. There was fierce competition between the form groups with 10A coming in first, closely followed by 8A then 8B. Well done to all who managed to work them out! The day continued with the last ten minutes of every lesson dedicated to the teacher reading an excerpt from one of their favourite books. An activity enjoyed by students and staff alike!



Along with other Senior Leaders, I have been fortunate to be able to observe whole lessons this week. It has been fantastic to see the learning experience of the students and the great work in their books. The Word of the Day was displayed in every classroom with students and staff taking the opportunity to use the words in lessons – did you notice any of these words being used at home this week?

Journal protagonist prologue illustrator denouement

The words for next week are linked to science as we are celebrating British Science week:

Monday - immune
Tuesday - theory
Wednesday - reliable
Thursday - climate
Friday – valid

Assembly this week, led by Assistant Headteacher Mrs Lee, was on the theme of Resilience. The boys had to consider the different ways in which you communicate, verbally, non-verbally and written. We encouraged the boys to think about the way they communicate in different settings and to different people.

As ever, it has been lovely to see the learning taking place in lessons, here is a small snapshot of some of the fantastic lessons this week (including Mr Abusef taking part on the drums in a music lesson!).

Have a good weekend.

Mrs Ash

Interim Headteacher